Nothing would make me happier, unfortunately, the hatchling is responsible for his own transformation. He must find the four fairy trees and gorge himself on their juice. This task is risky, for the trees are protected by the ghosts of tree guardians. You must see that this Fairy Leaf is affixed to the tree when his thirst is sated.

"Please be more specific about what must be done for him to become a strider!" You have earned 4 Fairy Leaf(s).

What more can I tell you?

"Tell me about the four fairy trees."

"Tell me about the ghosts of tree guardians."

"Tell me about the Fairy Leaf."

The four fairy trees are connected. Their roots traverse unimaginable depths to touch the Mother Tree Glade in the Elven Forest. The Essence of Wind, star, twilight and the abyss respectively flow within the trunks of these trees... These elements are essential for a hatchling to mature properly... Legend says that these trees were planted long ago by King Raul after he met the Lady of the Lake. He did this at the behest of the Lady of the Lake to stop the poisonous smog that was coming over from Dragon Valley. Now, in the northern section of the valley, those damn hunters have settled down....

And there is one thing that you have to be absolutely careful about! While this sap is indispensable for a hatchling's growth, it is a deadly poison to your race. If you handle a fairy tree, you will likely get sick and die.

Back

These are the spirits of elves who protected the Mother Tree Glade in ancient times. In death they have lost their former discretion and attack indiscriminately anyone who ventures near. You will find many souls in each tree. Your hatchling is certain to be attacked by these spirits when it is drinking the sap of the trees.

You must use care when defending your hatchling, for if a fairy tree is cut down, the spirits from within that tree will be set loose upon you and your party. This would be disastrous.
