How long will you be an apprentice? Don't you have any ambition? I hope you are not under the impression that you have reached a comfortable level. Now listen to me carefully. I shall tell you about Dwarven education.
Hear about Dwarven Education

Chat
Warehouse Keeper Valkon:
Dwarven apprentices will work in the Strip Mine to strengthen their bodies and spirits, as well as learning to protect their own bodies. When they complete basic training they return to the Dwarven Village and accumulate experience while assisting the Elders of the guilds with chores.
After they pass the exam given by the guild, and are awarded the title of Scavenger or Artisan, they are no longer considered apprentices. But even that is not enough to become an official guild member. Only when they pass the Trial of the Guildsman will they be accepted as a true guild member.
This test is essential if you intend to learn the techniques of a high-level guild member and aspire to the profession of Bounty Hunter or Warsmith.
I will take the Test of the Guildsman.

Very well! First, take this insignia, which signifies that you are performing the Trial of the Guildsman. Many blacksmiths and senior warehouse keepers will assist you when they see it.
The trial itself is very straightforward. You must make 7 Journeyman Rings. Don't be fooled by the apparent simplicity, however. The process of making the rings themselves is a critical test of a Dwarf's skill and wit.
Why 7 rings, you ask? Well, it's a tradition reaching back to the beginning of the Kingdom and the formation of the guilds themselves. Six of the rings go to the elders of the 6 guilds, while the last is reserved for the King who will return.
To obtain the ring design blueprint, visit Blacksmith Altran on Talking Island. I will write a letter of introduction for you, free of charge. When you finish creating all 7 rings, return here.
Take this Dimension Diamond. You can trade it for something special from the village gatekeeper. I hope it will help you on your journey. What are youn waiting for?
Ask if he has any more hints to give you.

Back in the old days I had to memorize hundreds of formulas. Now they all have recipes! What will they think of next?
OK, here is the recipe for making a Journeyman Ring. Let me see...
[Production of Journeyman Ring]
[Materials] 1 Journeyman Gem, 1 Journeyman Deco Bead, 1 Steel, 10 Varnish, 10 Grade D Crystals
[Result] 1 Journeyman Ring
Steel and Varnish are commonly used and easily found. Journeyman Gems and Journeyman Deco Beads are harder to find, however.

Oh yes! That's right. You said that you were in the middle of taking a test to be a union member?
A Journeyman Gem is not something you can get from somewhere, you have to make it yourself. But the skills of making it is not something that can be taught in a short time...
I shall make one for you instead of teaching you the skills.
First you must find me the materials needed to make the jewel. Any objection to going and finding the materials for yourself? You didn't expect such and old man like me to run around and collect the materials, did you?
